

REPORT BANDITS KILL AMERICANS

DEATH FREES MRS. KABER

TUMOR CLAIMS LIFE OF WOMAN SERVING
LIFE MURDER TERM

Convicted In Death Of Husband; Refused
Medical Aid

MARYSVILLE, O., April 13.—Mrs. Eva Katherine Kaber was dead at the Marysville Reformatory for Women here today—successful to the end in her determination to receive no medical treatment for a giant tumor which had almost constantly endangered her health since she was sentenced to a life term ten years ago for the murder of her husband, Dan Kaber, a Cleveland publisher.

Mrs. Kaber, whose death was said by physicians to be due to acute indigestion and effects of the tumor, refused a last offer of an operation Friday afternoon. She was 50 years old.

Soon after her refusal of an operation on Friday she grew weaker and Saturday night she became unconscious. Mrs. Kaber's daughter, Marion Henke of Cleveland, was with her when she died.

Mrs. Kaber's steadfast refusal to accept medical treatment despite her serious condition attracted nationwide interest. The murder for which she was convicted was a mystery to the country for two years before she was sentenced to a life term in the reformatory.

On the stand Mrs. Emma Colavito told how she had been employed by Mrs. Kaber to use "spiritualistic" methods to "get rid of" her husband.

Declaring that Mrs. Kaber found the "spiritualistic" system too slow, she said the publisher's widow hired Salvatore Cala and Victoria Pisselli to use swifter means.

Kaber was murdered in his elaborate home in Lakewood. He had been dragged from his bed and stabbed twenty-four times with a home-made dagger.

In 1921, two years after the slaying, Cala, who was said to have been the actual killer, was sentenced to a life term in the Ohio penitentiary. Pisselli died in Italy where he now is said to be serving a thirty-year sentence for murder.

The final solution to the Kaber murder was delayed because Mrs. Kaber insisted to police that burglars had committed the crime. She was visiting at Cedar Point at the time of the slaying and offered that theory upon her return.

Her explanation was generally accepted until private detectives employed by Moses Kaber, father of the publisher, reported that an examination of the body showed that he had been given arsenic.

Kaber became ill May 1, 1919, more than two months before his death, and was taken to three hospitals to be treated for a mysterious ailment. In one hospital he was operated upon for cancer.

The prosecution pointed out that this illness was due to the administering of certain medicines during the "spiritualistic" course of treatment.

Charges against Mrs. Colavito and against Miss Marian McCordie, Mrs. Kaber's daughter by a former marriage, and Mrs. Mary Brickell, Mrs. Kaber's mother, were subsequently dropped.

Before her marriage to the publisher Mrs. Kaber had been married to a former saloonkeeper, who obtained a divorce three days after the ceremony. She had also been wedded to a Chicago bookbinder from whom she later obtained a divorce.

FOREST FIRES SWEEP MICHIGAN WOODS AND CITIES THREATENED

Village Destroyed But Deny Lives Lost, Lumber Company Heavy Loser And Workmen Jobless; Charge Fire Was Incendiary

MENOMINEE, Mich., April 13.—Scenes of the wildest disorder were enacted in this wooded north county along the Wisconsin-Michigan state border today as forest fires, raging uncontrolled, swept through the district.

Little credence was given to already published reports that a score of persons were believed to have perished in the flames. Forest rangers and fire officials in Michigan and Wisconsin cities in the area did not report a single casualty. Property loss has already mounted to millions of dollars. The town of Wallace, eighteen miles from here, was completely destroyed. A small church and a one-room schoolhouse were the only buildings left standing in the village of 225 persons.

Adding to the general state of fear were charges that the fires were of incendiary origin. Menominee and Marquette, Wisconsin, were afire today when a sudden shift in the wind sent the flames back into the residential sections. A $1,000,000 Menominee lumber yard, with 30,000,000 feet of lumber and 2,000,000 feet of cut logs has already been burned. Citizens in the northern residential section of the city prepared to evacuate their homes. Business has been brought to a standstill. At the height of the conflagration, the lumber yard represented one-eleventh of the property valuation of the city. A C. Wells, president of the company, bitterly charged:

JACK DEMPSEY ADMITS PLANS FOR A DIVORCE

Says Estelle Wants Separation To Resume Career

LOS ANGELES, April 13.—In a copyright story today the Los Angeles Examiner today printed the following story under a Reno, Nevada, date:

The Dempseys—Jack and Estelle—are at the parting of the ways.

Pinned right down to facts here late yesterday, the former heavyweight champion of the world admitted that he was about to file papers for a divorce. That he was doing so at the behest of his wife and that he had hoped to dodge publicity for her sake and for the sake of a cinema and operatic career which he says she has put above home life and which has wrecked their future together.

Here's the way Dempsey puts it: "I have not heard a word from Estelle since I left our Los Felix Boulevard home March 11. I look my clothes, all my personal belongings and my farewell at her request. She it was who said 'we are through.' There is nothing I can do about it but go through, get the divorce and free her for the career which she believes is ahead of her."

"Love her? Sure I do. But I want a home, a family and family life. She doesn't. I am stepping aside against my own wishes and in asking a divorce I have nothing in mind about hurting anyone but myself. I've never been a squawker all my life and there are times when I could have had plenty of support had I chosen to do so."

"For two years we have been apart, really. Since my retirement from actual fighting I have had to keep on the hustler protecting investments, seeking some permanent occupation and making the most of what little popularity that is still mine."

"Our first three years of married life were ideal. We had an agreement that she was to continue acting for the screen only so long as I continued actual fighting. When I quit the ring she was to quit the stage and screen and settle down in Los Angeles for a happy future among our friends, her best-loved environment and our mutual associates."

"She refuses to do these things. Later she has been told by a singing career, an operatic future is to be hers and it has changed her completely. She wants none of me."

"On what grounds will I ask divorce?"

ACCUSE MAN OF MURDER OF TWO

Kills Wife And Lover In Middletown

MIDDLETOWN, O., April 13.—John Olinger, 34, of Middletown, was to be questioned further by police here today in connection with the slaying of his estranged wife, Cora Olinger, 27, of Dayton, and Grant Shoemaker, 23, of Middletown. He was held on a charge of murder.

Police arrested Olinger shortly after the shootings. They said Olinger and his wife separated several months ago.

Reconstructing the circumstances of the murders, police said that Mrs. Olinger had come here to look over some furniture that had been stored in a house here following her estrangement from her husband.

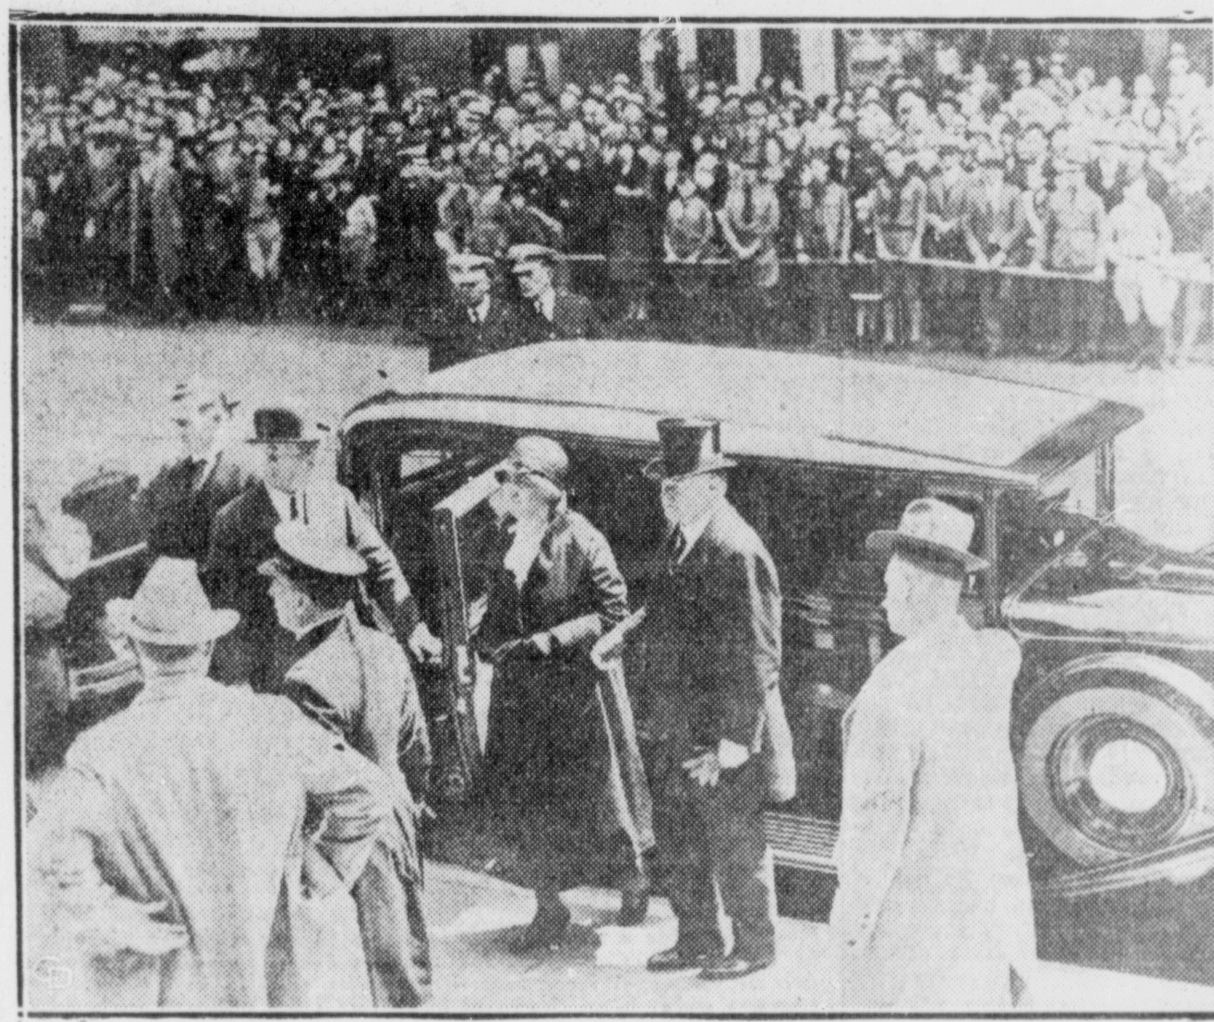

Olinger followed his wife, according to the police theory, and shot her seven times. He then attempted to commit suicide, police alleged, but succeeded in inflicting only a scalp wound.

Olinger then went to an oil station where Shoemaker was employed and after a quarrel, during which Olinger accused Shoemaker of paying attentions to his estranged wife, he shot Shoemaker three times, according to the police theory.

AUTO TRACK RECORD MAY BE SHATTERED IN SPEEDWAY RACES

New Speed Expected By 1930 Winner Of Annual Classic

NEW YORK, April 13.—America's fastest racing automobiles will compete next month in the international 500-mile classic for $100,000 in prizes at the Indianapolis speedway and in the opinion of Billy Arnold, youthful winner of the 1929 grid, a new world's record will be established.

The present record is 101.13 miles an hour for the 500 miles and is held by Peter De Paolo, winner in 1925.

Arnold, who leaves for Indianapolis this afternoon to prepare for his defense of the American championship which he now holds, predicted that the race cars in this year's contest will be seven to ten miles an hour faster than they were last year.

More than sixty cars—the largest nomination list in the history of the annual Indianapolis spectacle—will be entered in the contest but only the forty fastest cars will face the starter on race day. Time trials, which will eliminate all but the forty best, will be held a few days before the date of the race. The minimum speed for qualifying is ninety miles an hour.

In winning last year, Arnold was slower than De Paolo's record mark of 101.13 miles an hour for the distance. Arnold was held at a snail's pace nearly ten laps while six cars, all wrecked at once in the north turn, were removed from the path of the speeding cars.

At least three previous 500-mile winners will be pitted against each other this year in an attempt to win a second race, a feat accomplished by only one pilot, Tommy Milton, who won in 1921 and in 1923 but who since has retired. De Paolo, 1925 winner, Louis Meyer, 1928 winner and Arnold will be in the competition. It is not likely that Ralph De Palma, 1915 winner and De Paolo's uncle, will start a car.

Leon Duray, a veteran at Indianapolis and holder of the record for one lap at 124.018 miles an hour, also is in the list of stars who have entered the race.

ESTELLE TAYLOR DENIES SHE ASKED DIVORCE FROM JACK

By HAZEL FLYNN
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

LOS ANGELES, April 13.—Whatever the world may believe following the statement attributed to Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight boxing champion his wife Estelle Taylor, film star, does not put any stock in it. She told me today:

"Jack never said anything like that. He is too chivalrous."

That was her first remark after she had read a copyright story in the Los Angeles Examiner which stated that Jack Dempsey had told reporters that he was in Reno to get a divorce. The Examiner story said that he told the reporter that he was there to get the divorce at his wife's behest; that he had hope to dodge publicity for her sake, but that he had come to the parting of the ways because she put her cinema career and the hope of a brilliant future in opera above home life.

Her deep eyes flashed as she considered what the newspaper claimed Dempsey had said about her. She exclaimed:

"Not made him a real wife. Let my career interfere with our domestic happiness. Why I have given up dozens of engagements in

HARDING BEFRIENDED WOMAN THOUGHT SPY LETTERS REVEAL

NEW YORK, April 13.—Two unusual autograph letters described as having been written by President Harding and placing him while a United States senator as befriending a woman suspected as a spy, were revealed today.

Nothing has ever been published before concerning the letters, which form a part of an exhibition of American historical documents opening here tomorrow. The letters, believed to have been written by President Harding when he was a United States senator in 1918, are addressed "My dear Jim" and revealed his anxiety concerning the conduct of a woman described in the letters as "Carrie."

At the time "Carrie" was under the "eye of government agents" as a German informer the letters indicated and Mr. Harding did not desire her to visit Washington. Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach, conducting the exhibition, said today he bought the letters from some one whose identity he was not at liberty to disclose. The original envelopes were missing and Rosenbach could reveal nothing concerning the letters.

The second letter was as follows: "I know she is no German in former—couldn't be. Yet these things have been reported. I never have doubted her ability to square herself with a reasoning government agent. . . . It is a pity that there can be such danger but war is hell and sanity does not always prevail. Hence the need of extreme prudence, caution, wisdom and tact. . . . She (Carrie) and I believe ought not to come to Washington now. Nor ought they to go to New York. I had some inquiry made about things said, and the Washington trip last year led to suspicion about acting as informant. . . . and the suspicion was confirmed by the long stay at the naval base at Port Jefferson. . . . Any call I made any call they made would be watched."

In conclusion he speaks of his connection as being very solemn and "this war problem has distressed me infinitely more than you can guess, I believe, I know Carrie is loyal and helpful. But prejudices and passions are not at my command."

MARINES RUSHED TO EAST NICARAGUA AS VIOLENCE LEARNED

Marine Captain And Several Civilians
Are Victims

(BULLETIN)
COLON, Panama, April 13.—Twenty-five United States marines and ten civilians were reported killed today in a clash with Nicaraguan rebels at Puerto Cabezas, according to unconfirmed dispatches reaching here from Bluefields.

Several Americans were reported killed in a new flare-up of bandit violence at Puerto Cabezas, Nicaragua, today, as heavy forces of United States marines were rushed to the east coast of the country to end the depredations.

The killings followed an earlier outbreak at Logtown, where Captain Harlan Peley of the Marines was slain by rebel bandits. Radio messages from Bluefields said the offices, saw-mill and fruit plantations of the Standard Fruit Co., an American concern, were laid waste by the rebels, while the commissary was looted.

The American victims lost their lives in defense of the property, the messages declared. Meanwhile, a small detachment of Nicaraguan National Guardsmen were beleaguered by insurgents in the hills south of Logtown. A detachment of Marines was rushed to the spot aboard the U. S. S. Asheville.

According to reports received here, the trapped patrol was dispatched from Puerto Cabezas under command of Marine Lieutenant Darrah to aid another detachment whose leader, Captain Harlan Peley, was shot dead by insurgents lurking inside a house in Logtown. The cruiser Memphis, with a landing force of 250, was also ordered to Puerto Cabezas as further reports came in warning of sudden extensive rebel activities in that vicinity, with the town itself threatened with an attack.

Captain Peley was killed while investigating reports of bandit activities in Logtown. Opening the door of a house, the hidden assailants fired upon the officer and a corporal with him. The latter was wounded.

When word of the ambush reached Marine headquarters at Puerto Cabezas, another detachment was sent out. The manager of the lumber company at Logtown informed officers that insurgents had surrounded the relief force.

Bombing planes took off from Managua and Marines were ordered to help Darrah's detachment. It was stated here that the beleaguered Marine lieutenant and his National Guardsmen were putting up a desperate battle against the heavily armed insurgents.

THREE HURT IN PLANE CRASH

All Will Recover From Injuries

CLEVELAND, April 13.—Three Pittsburgh men were reported recovering today from injuries received when their airplane overturned after making a forced landing in a farm field on the outskirts of this city last night.

The injured were W. R. Scully, 24; Francis James, 22, and Keltan J. Erdeky, 24, the pilot of the plane. Scully, suffering from several fractured ribs, and James with a broken leg, were confined at Deaconess Hospital. Erdeky was badly shaken up in the crash.

The three were enroute to Pittsburgh from Detroit where they had attended the national air show when the crash occurred. Forced to land when the plane ran out of gasoline, the pilot skinned low over the field and landed in a rough section. The craft nosed over, burying the propeller in the ground. The plane was badly damaged.

Love for Dancer Adds to King Zog's Woes

Clandestine Romance of Albanian Monarch Threatens Life and Throne, Emulating Episodes of Carol of Roumania and Tragic Love of Manuel of Portugal for Celebrated Gaby Deslys.

NEW YORK, April 13.—At last the King of Albania has found somebody he loves better than himself.

For her sake King Zog is braving the assassin's bullet. The little King who feared to go to a hospital only a few blocks away from his castle, and was for years a virtual prisoner in his own palace, is now running around Vienna like a debutante. For the King of Albania is in love.

He is madly, recklessly in love with the beautiful, flaming-haired dancing girl, Frances Janko, the daughter of a garener, King Zog met Frances five years ago while she was a music hall star.

There are those who predict that the little dancing girl will become a second Mme. Lupescu, and will do as much damage to the kingly position of Zog as did Mme. Lupescu to the princely position of the present King Carol of Roumania. Will the romance of the Albanian monarch bring troubles on his kingly head and remove the crown from him as did the romance between King Manuel of Portugal and another celebrated dancer, Gaby Deslys?

Perhaps one of the chief obstacles to the love of King Zog lies in the fact that many years ago he contracted a Moslem marriage and now does not dare to get a divorce and take a Western bride, as he would like to do.

Zog's bride is the daughter of Shefi Verlaci, Bey of Elbassan. The marriage took place during the Balkan wars. He is married in the Moslem fashion to a wife he has never seen. According to Western custom he is a bachelor, but in a land preponderantly Moslem he is regarded as a married man—to the daughter of one of the most powerful nobles in Albania.

According to custom he cannot divorce her until he has brought her to his home. To divorce her before the consummation of the marriage would be cause for blood-feud between two families and Zog is bad enough off with 800 sworn blood-friends on his head without perpetrating another and much greater one.

At one time it was said King Zog had tried to make Princess Giovanna, of Italy, his queen. If he had succeeded, it is certain that he would have lost his throne and, perhaps, lost his life. If he tries to marry Mile, Janko he may find himself just as badly off.

After all, there isn't much in life for poor King Zog. He can't marry the lady of his choice. He can't go out and have fun, because he is apt to be killed by a blood-feud. He can't smoke because cigarettes have almost killed him.

He declined to leave Vienna and no wonder, for the little King feels he is comparatively safe there and refuses to go home to boredom and danger. Once more the love of a commoner places a throne in jeopardy—and proves to the handsome Albanian, who was Premier of his country at 26, that there are many things which as an officer in the Albanian army he could do that must forever be denied him as the ruler of Albania.

order to be with him and have crossed the continent nine times just to spend a few hours with him."

She ruffled through the contents of a desk and finally pulled out a telegram, well-fingered and worn, saying:

"Lived apart for two years. Read this. It's dated February 7 here's what it says. 'Congratulations on six years of happy marriage. You've been a champion wife.'"

"They claim he said I was extravagant. Why that is nonsense and none knows it better than Jack. Why I even do without a personal maid. All I have in the way of servants are one house maid, a butler and a chauffeur. The only time that I have ever been anything like extravagant was when I spent $5,000 of my own money to decorate Jack's own room in red leather because he liked it so well."

The girl who is admired by millions as a great actress was nothing but "just folks." Just a woman hurt by her mate, when she cried out:

"They say he said we have not lived as husband and wife for two years. Why he never could say that. He was here on March 6, right in this house, and stayed for two days."

"As for my career in place of a home and babies. That's nonsense. I have always wanted babies more than anything else in the world. Right now I am offered the star part in 'Street Scene' by Samuel Goldwyn and I held up my answer until I could get in touch with Jack and find out what his plans were. If they were such as not to permit us to be together I would refuse the part. Now I don't know what to do."

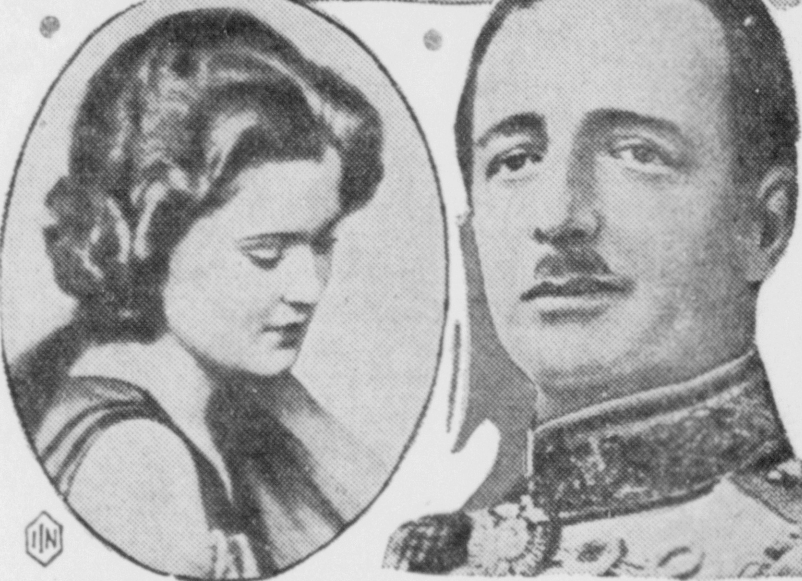

"I still love Jack and still believe in him. I don't believe he said one word of what this paper says he said. But if he did, I'll fight—and I'll tell plenty."

FIND STOLEN CAR

A Reo sedan, 1929 model, belonging to Chalmers W. Murphy, 808 N. King St., stolen from its parking place in front of the First M. E. Church, W. Second St., sometime between 8 and 10 p. m. Saturday, was recovered at Springfield Monday, according to a report to police. A bag of golf clubs and two robes were in the car when it was stolen.

KING CAROL II and MME. LUPESCU.

FRANCES JANKO

KING ZOG.

Royal love for a dancer is again likely to lose a throne. The love of King Zog, of Albania, for Frances Janko has already brought fire on the royal lover from a would-be assassin in Vienna. The troubles which beset the royal lover recall the unhappy romance of King Manuel, of Portugal, for the celebrated dancer, Gaby Deslys, which cost him his throne and the no less romantic ardors of King Carol II, of Rumania, for Mme. Lupescu, which brought him many years of banishment, and still is a cloud in the kingdom.

orce?" and Dempsey paused for breath looked inquiringly at Leonard Sacks, his business manager. "Incompatibility covers it, Jack." His associate told him and to that word Dempsey warmed right up laughing. "Call it that if it fits," he said. "There will be no sensational charges on my part and no bitterness."

"I want no hard feelings but I do want it clearly understood that I take divorce action at her specific request; that she regards married life with me as a hurdle to her ambitions in the operatic world. I've done everything I know to keep her happy. Over a year ago we agreed on a property settlement which was made and which gave her a just share of whatever I possess."

"You know I'm no longer getting those fat purses and have to hustle to keep ahead of that sheriff. Like every other business man in these times I have a lot of frozen assets and am far from being the wealthy man a lot of folks believe me."

"Estelle can make big money in screen and opera. I hope that the girl gets every break in her favor, climbs to the heights. Only I also hope that once she gets there she won't like, look back and feel that emptiness, that lack of home life, home associations and pals that make the struggle to climb seem so darn useless."

"On all my trips she has refused to accompany me. Until this last breach I never missed calling her up no matter where I was. I haven't called her this trip nor has she called me. In two years she has never once written me a line or a letter. All the wooing has been done by me and I guess I made a big mistake.

"As soon as this business is over here I believe I'll take a trip to Europe or Africa and do some shooting and have a bit of fun. I have several foreign offers for stage work and for appearances. Definitely and positively I am done fighting. That goes for the home department, too."

Dempsey has been advised that he will have to show six weeks residence after May 1 as the New Nevada six week divorce law does not go into effect until that date.

"I've got to go through and honestly I'd rather fight Tunney tonight, Schmeling tomorrow night than do it. I've made it a rule to give Estelle everything she wants—this is no exception," he explains haltingly.

Dempsey has a fishing jaunt planned for late this week when the season opens and denies that he is here to buy any interest in a gambling casino.

"Eisenada cured me of that type of investment," he laughed.

CEDARVILLE PUPIL RANKS HIGH IN EIGHTH GRADE COMPETITION

Justin Hartman, pupil at Cedarville, ranked first with a score of 175 out of a possible 200 points in the annual eighth grade educational contest for all school children of that grade in Greene County, conducted April 6 under the direction of county superintendent and the executive heads of the eleven large districts of the county.

A total of 287 pupils enrolled for the test and the results were announced after nearly 100 school superintendents and teachers labored for four hours, checking and double-checking the examination papers to ascertain the rank of all children who had participated.

The manuscripts have been forwarded to the state department of education, where they will be re-scored. The medium for this county will be announced soon and a comparison made between the results in Greene County and those in other counties throughout the state.

H. C. Aultman, county school superintendent, points out that in past years this county has furnished pupils who have ranked among the highest, both in the sectional and state contests.

The requirement for promotion to the ninth grade is determined when returns are received by the state department from the entire state and a minimum grade is struck. All pupils who attained at least the minimum score will enter high school next fall.

PLAN TO DEDICATE HOME VOCATIONAL BUILDING ON MAY 9

The newly completed $80,000 vocational training building at the O. S. and S. O. Home will be dedicated with appropriate ceremonies Saturday, May 9.

Date for the dedicatory exercises was revealed Monday by Capt. Harold L. Hays, superintendent, who said Governor George White has been invited to deliver the principal address. Whether the chief executive will accept the offer is still uncertain.

The trades building, a two-story brick structure, containing eight trade shops with class room adjoining, is completed but has not been equipped, Supt. Hays said. The floor area of the building is 250,000 square feet. The exterior is finished in red brick while the inside is white glazed.

One hundred and sixty boys may be easily accommodated in the building at one time. If the institutional population should increase to twice its present size the shops would still be adequate to take care of the trade situation, it is pointed out.

The complete program for the dedication services has not been outlined although it is certain innovations will be extended to heads of the various state patriotic organizations to participate in the ceremony. Dr. John L. Clifton, state director of education, and E. L. Heusch, state director of vocational training, may also be in attendance.

DAYTON RACKETEER KILLED; REPORTED SLAYER IS WOUNDED

DAYTON, O., April 13.—"Alex the Greek" Pitakos, alleged racketeer, bootlegger and gambler, was shot and killed at Crystal Gardens Dance Hall near here today in a mysterious gun fight in which Floyd Shawhan, a known gambler, was seriously wounded.

Police expressed the belief that the shooting was a result of a racketeering rivalry that had grown up between the two men and indicated that their competition culminated in a gun fight and terrific struggle this morning.

Tables were upset and blood marks were found on the floor of the dance hall when the place was visited by Sheriff Fred Wolfe and police. The resort was deserted, however, and police were unable to find any witnesses to the shooting. Shawhan refused to discuss his injuries or reveal how he had been wounded when visited by authorities at the Miami Valley Hospital.

"You know me, I won't talk," he was said to have replied when the sheriff attempted to question him.

When Shawhan recovers police will hold him for investigation, it was said.

The scene of the shooting on Brandt Pike near here, they declared, is a gambling resort.

PROSECUTOR ASKED TO DEFEND BOARD AGAINST INJUNCTION

Beavercreek Twp. school board passed a resolution Saturday authorizing Prosecuting Attorney Marcus McCallister to represent it and take whatever legal steps are necessary to combat injunction proceedings brought recently on behalf of 674 residents of the west side of the township to prevent erection of the new $180,000 centralized school building on the Haines farm site.

Three of the five members of the board voted in favor of defending the suit while the other two members expressed themselves as being indifferent whether a temporary injunction now in force is dissolved or made permanent.

George Durnbaugh, Albert Ankeney and George Shank were the members who voted in favor of proceeding to defend the board in the court action, while S. H. Shawhan and Harry Ferguson did not sign the resolution. They said they were not particular where the school is built so long as it is erected somewhere and the project is not delayed any longer.

Board members claim they decided upon the Haines farm as a compromise site, situated midway between the present high school and Zimmerman. Residents of the west side favor a site at Zimmerman and those of the east side are said to prefer the present site.

Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy is expected to assign the injunction suit for another hearing soon.

BURLESQUE SHOW CLOSED BY POLICE

COLUMBUS, O., April 13.—Owners of the Lyceum Theater, a burlesque house, today were up in arms against police action yesterday in closing the show just before the afternoon performance. "Obscenity in general" was given by police as the reason for their action.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

It is an hour for a man to case from strife; but every fool will be meddling.—Proverbs 20:3.

WAS "IN WRONG"

Dr. Joseph Miller of Teachers' college, Columbia university, probably "got in wrong" with a lot of fond parents, but at the same time he earned the gratitude of a lot of other parents by speaking out boldly and saying that about half the so-called bright children are just "good talkers," and that the so-called dull ones often show exceptional intelligence when their natural shyness or reticence is cast aside.

There is plenty of support for Dr. Miller's idea, too. Indeed, if the child really is "father of the man," there isn't a chance for any successful contradiction of the general correctness of his remark.

A little experience with the world proves to any observant person that it isn't the amount a person says, but the quality of what he says that indicates the sort of brain existing above the mouth. Almost anybody with an over-grown ego who isn't sensitive can develop a gift of gab. And if a person of that type has a little imagination, and maybe a little magnetism, he may easily become a religious leader, or a successful politician or propagandist, or maybe even a high pressure salesman, though the last isn't always so easy. And he may have only a dim idea of what it is all about.

Of course we don't mean to say that all religious leaders, politicians and so forth who have eloquence, are of that type. We wouldn't be guilty of so foolish and sweeping an assertion. Some people really can talk a lot and still think a lot; but they are not typical. They are extraordinary.

Usually an orator even of the highest type is not especially strong when it comes to exact, logical, upbuilding thought; and all too frequently he is anything but a safe and reliable guide when he undertakes to become a leader. That's one reason why so many good causes go kerplunk into the ditch.

You have known people like that yourself, eloquent but intellectually nebulous. Perhaps you have "fallen for" some of them in your time. We all do more or less, particularly when we are young and ardent, and not very apt in discriminating between fact and fiction.

On the other hand, the silence that is golden attracts no attention amid the general din. The person who practices because of the substance of what he utters and because of what he accomplishes; and in a world prone to accept self-assertiveness as a proof of merit, he generally has a hard, slow road to travel before he gets the credit, large or small, due him. Often that sort of a person fails to the end to impress his fellow men, simply because he cannot learn how to blow his own horn, or will not outrage his self-respect by doing it. However, when the silent person of exceptional intelligence does come to his own, he does so with a bang; and he represents the type that counts most in promoting the progress of the race.

ALASKA'S PROBLEM

The handful of reindeer taken into the Seward peninsula of Alaska forty years ago have multiplied into herds numbering hundreds of thousands, according to the report of Senator Kendrick's committee to Secretary Wilbur, within whose official province they roam. They have become a problem—as a matter of fact two problems—which demand government attention. Among the herds are thousands of mavericks, whose ownership must be established; and the outside market for reindeer meat must be enlarged in order to absorb the excess of supply over the Alaskan demand.

The latter problem is of particular interest in this country. Vilhjalmur Stefansson once pointed out that there are three belts across the continent, a steer belt, above that a horse belt and in the still further north a reindeer belt. Within each of these belts its respective animal can be profitably grown for human food. Stefansson admitted that people in Canada and the United States would have to be educated to the taste of horse and reindeer flesh; but he saw no insuperable obstacle to success in that direction. The adoption of Christianity by his ancestors was delayed six hundred years because they preferred horse meat to a creed which forbade the eating of any animal that did not have a cloven hoof. Certain northern European countries today have extensive horse packing industries, whose products are consumed by their less well to do citizens.

Without any such religious scruple to overcome, a taste for reindeer meat ought to be developable in this country, which would afford relief to the Alaska reindeer farmers, without injuring our domestic digestion. A considerable tonnage of this meat already is consumed in the United States every year; and there is no doubt that if the output of the Alaskan ranges were aggressively merchandised, which includes advertising the amount of vitamins and calories in reindeer steak, a far larger market for it could be created. The reindeer is a clean feeding animal and its flesh nutritious and delectable (once one's palate becomes familiar with it).

NATURE-LOVING

A speaker at last week's celebration of the ninety-fourth anniversary of the birth of John Burroughs by the John Burroughs Memorial association in New York city, allude to the sage of "Slabside" as "the man in the garden" who drew the attention of the nation to living things, when it was rapidly being industrialized. Unfortunately his influence in that direction was not so enduring as might have been wished. There is more money in making things than in contemplating nature; and in a competitive age money is necessary to survival. At the same time, an inextinguishable source of gratuitous enjoyment is closed to those who go through life blind to the beauties nature has strewn around them.

John Burroughs was a born nature-lover, a man who came into the world with eyes that saw through intelligence sharpened by sympathy, whose profound love for birds and other living things was enhanced by self-instruction in their habits and ways. "I have traveled extensively," said Thoreau, "in Concord," and he could "see" enough in a morning's walk to write a volume on. John Burroughs could "see" enough in the wild life about his hermitage on the Hudson for a lifetime's contemplative enjoyment. Such eyes are not given to all men.

An American student in China, strolling over the fields with his city-bred Chinese teacher, stooped and plucked a wild flower. "What is this called in Chinese?" he asked. "A flower," replied the teacher. "Yes, I know," said the student; "but what is its specific name?" "Just a flower," said the teacher, with a show of indifference. This was the antithesis of John Burroughs, who loved and knew and derived intense enjoyment from the examination and contemplation of nature in all its manifestations.

The person who goes through life with no understanding of nature, who knows nothing of geology or botany or zoology or ornithology, cannot take advantage of one of the greatest field of enjoyment open to mankind, a chance to make friends with nature. John Burroughs was born in April, when spring was beginning to unlock the flowers and the birds to sing; but whether born in April or November, anyone who studies and observes nature will find that out of an understanding of such things will come a love for and a feeling of kinship with them.

We believe it is not true that Nevada attaches a marriage license coupon to all divorce decrees.

If there is one thing sappier than a maple tree it's a spring poet.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALE

NEW YORK.—The motion picture public is rapidly tiring of films dealing with crime and gang rule. "I have been offered $100,000 to play a gangster role in a motion picture," said Scarface Al Capone. Tell the truth, or somebody will tell it for you.

IN LIKE A LAMB

With the Apostles of A Better Day out in force tying knots in the Tammany Tiger's tail, what chance has the circus?

The most refined, elegant, greatest, grandest and most magnificent show ever organized," as the late lamented Phineas Taylor Barnum used to describe it, hit town the other morning; and its agent was chronicled thus:

"Thirty elephants, led by a mahout arrayed not in silk but in denim, walked down 1st Ave. early this morning—hours before dawn. They trudged along, heads bowed down with a deep sadness. Passing the windows of grimy tenements, the darkened fronts of small, compact factories, they did not look up. There were no trumpeting, no dance steps; nothing but the slow, plodding march."

A REJUVENATOR

How can you expect a modern sophisticate of nine or ten—interested in his "Child's Life of Oscar Wilde"—to get het up over the circus coming to town?

The circus no longer is a kid's show. Its appeal is chiefly to the Old Uns—who cling to memories as seaweed clings to an oyster!

TRADE MARK

Years ago whenever a showgirl broke into print—in the news columns—it was said of her that she was "One of the Floradora Sextette."

Then along came Old Doc Ziegfeld with his "Follies" and the news writers and headline builders abandoned "One of the Floradora Sextette" in favor of "Ex-Follies," or "Former Follies Girl."

The Old Master used to elevate a supercilious eyebrow once in awhile over some of the escapades of "Former Follies Girls" he'd never heard of; but so long as "His Ladies" didn't kick, why should he remonstrate?

Let's see, however, the Phony Pills of the Follies have been overstepping the more than liberal limits allotted them and The Doc has called a halt.

Hereafter all legitimate denizens of the Floridian's ranks are to be branded.

If she's really been glorified she'll be able to prove it. Avoid imitations. None genuine unless the initials F. Z. are stamped on the gambrel joint.

Boy, get me a dictionary immediately—and open it at the G's.

DEMOCRACY ON THE HALF SHELL

If the price brings the commodity within the reach of all, Park Avenue has absolutely no use for it. It's out—or as they say amid those sacrosanct precincts—"de trop."

Take orchids: The price of orchids "broke" some time ago. They're selling today anywhere from fifty cents to a dollar a bloom. That was sufficient to have excluded them from the corsage of Carrie-Tue-Careful, in the Park Avenue Easter Pee-rade.

But heaven always provides the man to meet the emergency. Just in the nick of time, some horticultural Owen D. Young stepped forward and saved the day with a "very special" variety of orchid that retails from $5 to $50 apiece, the scale depending altogether on the customer's susceptibility and the florist's conscience.

THE QUESTION BOX

Central Press Wash. Bureau

Answers to questions on information and fact can be obtained by writing to Central Press Bureau, 1435 East Twelfth street, Cleveland, O., and enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

No answers will be given to marital, medical or legal questions, nor will the estimated value of old coins be given.

Is Ohio important in the iron and steel ore industries?

Cleveland, O., ranks as the heaviest handler of ore in the world. More than 29 million tons are received annually.

POTTERY

Since the heat is so intense in kilns, what keeps the dishes from losing their shape in the process of baking?

The heat of the kiln melts the glaze, but usually does not distort the shape of the pottery. A few pieces usually must be discarded after each firing because they fall to hold their shape. The kilns are so constructed as to reduce this loss to a minimum.

A GREATER POWER HAS SPOKEN

CONGRESSMAN OPPOSES WHOLESALE DEPORTING OF "AVERAGE ALIENS"

WASHINGTON, April 9.—With unemployment all about it, it is understandable why American workmen object to any further immigration, at least for the present.

Also why they resent the bootlegging of unauthorized aliens into the country, and want them shipped home again as fast as they are caught here.

And of course the labor department reflects this complex on the workers' part, and is more than usually active in keeping the bars up, as well as in returning illegally-entered foreigners to the lands they came from.

The department's refusal to sanction the continued stay in the United States of a sojourner like Feodor M. Zvyavkin, whose sole mission here is to buy large quantities of American-made goods for Soviet Russia, is not so easy to account for.

As General Manager of the Amtorg Trading corporation, Zvyavkin's purchases have been at the rate of about $145,000,000 a year—enough to employ a lot of Yankee labor.

Nevertheless, the Washington government, which granted him permission to remain only for a limited length of time, refuses him an extension, and he has got to leave—expelled to all intents and purposes, for being a good customer. No doubt he is a Communist, but it is not charged that he has tried to make any American converts. In fact, Secretary of Labor William M. Doak, in announcing his stay in the country at an end, specifically says it is not because of anything he has done or left undone.

Congressman Samuel Dickstein of New York, has an explanation to offer, however. Uncle Sam has a new mania of deportation," according to Dickstein.

It is a rather satisfactory explanation (Dickstein's), because if it's a mania, there is no use in trying to argue any sense into it. There probably isn't any; at least not much.

But it is an unpleasant mania, Dickstein adds.

He went into the subject with me quite deeply just before Congress adjourned.

Concerning such of the mania's victims as Zvyavkin, the New York representative is not greatly worried. With the Moscow government back of him, Dickstein reckons that Feodor will be comfortably taken care of somewhere else—and most likely take his trade there, too. If American workmen can afford the loss of $145,000,000 a year in exports, Dickstein ventures the guess that Zvyavkin can stand being kicked out of the U. S. A.

The folk whose fate perturbs the Manhattan congressman are the small fry—the 100,000 miscellaneous aliens whom Secretary of Labor Doak is trying to deport during 1931.

It is Doak's contention that there are 400,000 foreigners in America who have no right to be here, but he admits he does not believe he can catch them all; his goal is 100,000 for a starter.

He proposes to deport them by "humane, liberal-minded" methods he says.

Dickstein laughs somewhat scornfully at this promise. He has his doubts, he confesses, not only of the humanity and liberal-mindedness, but also of the constitutionality of the Doak deportation system.

"I don't suppose," he remarked, "that the 'alien squads' warrantless, dragnet raids in February on the Finnish hall in New York, with its illegal detention of 1,000 men and women while their credentials were being overhauled; on the Seamen's Church institute, where 4,000 were restrained of their liberty en masse by officials having no jurisdiction over them; later on the municipal lodging house—I don't suppose that these incidents have occurred to the labor secretary as more lawless, anarchistic proceedings than those of any of the 'reds' he is trying to deport."

"The average alien," continued the congressman, "is about as friendly an individual as it is possible to imagine. He generally is poor, also. He seldom has much idea of his rights.

"Once in the immigration authorities' hands, it is no very difficult matter to deport him however regular his status may be. And mistakes are mighty apt to be made during these crusades.

"But can one fail to notice how few criminal aliens, who really ought to be banished, are shipped over seas? They have the organizations and the resources to put up a defense."

"Now and then, for some special reason," said the New Yorker, "one hears of deportation activity by the department against a foreigner of conspicuous standing; the case of General Manager Zvyavkin of the Amtorg corporation is in point.

"A thousand times more often the deportees are poor devils who simply are bundled on shipboard without a chance to have their stories listened to; much less investigated.

The Seamen's Church institute is raided; yes.

"Who ever heard of a raid on the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, St. Patrick's or Temple Emanu-El?"

They don't tattle on their brothers and sisters. They're very nice with the family cat. They sit demurely in a corner and read a book. They exhaust every possible method of pleasing their fathers and mothers and showing them how perfect a child can be.

They have nothing up their sleeves. This isn't a conspiracy. They don't intend to ask for anything—not this time. They're just being "good." They are enjoying, drinking deep, of that precious elixir of conscious virtue. They know they are being "good"; they know their parents know what "good children" they are being. A calm, sweet spirit pervades everything they do and shines out through their eyes and makes their cheeks a delicate pink. They say to their parent: "Aren't I being good?" and when you tell them they are, indeed, they purr like the happiest of kittens.

And the next day they wake up cross and fight with their brothers and sisters again—and tell their parents they are mean when they won't let them go to the movies.

And their fathers and mothers know that that sweet interlude of virtue is past. But fathers and mothers don't mind. Children can't be as good as that and be normal. It was good while it lasted, but fathers and mothers couldn't stand it if children were THAT good all the time. They'd worry about them.

Tonic Needed After Winter Months

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The spring has always been the appointed period for doing something definite to renew the health. The custom of giving a "spring tonic," or "sulphur and molasses," or, of course, with a good cleaning out of the intestines, is sacred by long observance.

The custom had more point in other days and other conditions of living than it has now.

It is difficult to realize how much improvement in health has resulted from modern improvements that were not primarily designed for health giving purposes at all. For instance, railroads, cold storage cars, plumbing, etc. Our grandparents lived on farms. They prepared for winter by getting sewed in their underwear, stopping up all the cracks around the windows, putting in a good supply of salt meat, preserves that had all the vitamins cooked out of them, potatoes, coffee and lard, and chopping plenty of wood. With the first blasts they shut themselves in and began to eat up their supplies. The railroad was twenty miles away over a rough dirt road, and did not bring any fresh food in any way.

By the time spring began to be expected they felt pretty droopy. They were tired of salt meat. Their gums were a little sore. They had a great deal of scurf on the skin of their hands.

When anybody asked them how they felt their regular reply was "Oh, I'll be all right as soon as I can get out and pick me a mess of greens."

There was very sound nutrition wisdom. The soreness of the gums indicated beginning scurvy from preserved and salt food. The greens had the vitamins in them which drove the scurvy away.

The value that is attached to "spring" lamb and "spring" chicken is due not entirely to the tender quality of the meat, but also to the fact that a young animal born in the spring and eating the fresh new greens and herbs of that season will have some anti-scurbutic and anti-pellagra substances in its flesh.

Modern industry, as I say, has changed all this. You will not need a spring tonic nearly as much as if you have been eating some fresh oranges or other fruit all winter. Nor will the baby need any sulphur and molasses.

If it has been having its cod liver oil regularly. The railroad and other forms of transportation bring to our door all the products of the orchards and the gardens of the south.

Still it may be a good thing to do a little regenerating in the spring. The muscles have probably got pretty flabby. The long mild days are here again and a regular four-mile walk every day should get the cricks and salty deposits out of the crevices of those joints and green vegetables and fruits will assure you that you have replaced the vitamins that the winter fast might have omitted. A "good cleaning out" "never hurt nobody." And just for old sake's sake a bottle of sarsaparilla should prepare you for the summer sun.

Editor's Note: Six pamphlets by Dr. Clendenning can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin for each and a self-addressed stamped envelope to Dr. Logan Clendenning, in care of this paper, or Central Press Association, 1435 East Twelfth street, Cleveland, O. Spring Work Necessitates Beauty

By GLADYS GLAD

This is the time of the year when most conscientious housewives begin lining up their mops, brooms and dusters in preparation for that annual spring cleaning campaign. One strenuous week of toil and turmoil, and the old household emerges in a most gratifyingly spotless condition.

The housewife, however, generally emerges from the rigors of the campaign in quite a different condition.

That spring cleaning is no slouch job, as anyone can tell you who has tried it—or even witnessed it. But it really needn't be as destructive to beauty as many women permit it to be.

In the first place, over-fatigue should be guarded against during this time. I would advise every housewife to extend her spring cleaning period to two or, if necessary, even three weeks, rather than to attempt to crowd her tasks all into one week. After a few hours of the heavy work that spring cleaning entails, a nap is almost a necessity. For it is fatigue that makes the eyes lose their brightness, make the skin dark and sallow, make the face old and wrinkled.

Let the meals that you prepare during the spring cleaning days be as simple as possible, in order to save your strength and energy. Do not attempt to cook a six-course dinner after you've been scrubbing, dusting and meaning all day. Pa and the kids will thrive just as healthily on the simpler and more easily prepared dishes.

Protect your hands as much as possible when doing your spring cleaning. Wear rubber gloves whenever you must put your hands in water. If you simply cannot work with rubber gloves on, be sure that you avoid coarse, strong soaps. And drop a bit of borax in every pail or basin of water you use. Many women find that rinsing the hands in a salt solution (one tablespoonful of salt to one quart of water) aids in offsetting the harmful effects of strong soaps.

The skin and hair should also be given some protection while in cleaning campaign is in full swing. Apply a coating of cold cream and powder to the face and neck to prevent the dust and dirt from accumulating in the pores. Wear a dust cap of some sort to help keep the hair clean. And brush your tresses thoroughly every evening to remove any particles of dust that may have accumulated there.

Is It Love Or Just Infatuation?

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Who is to tell whether what a young thing feels is real love or just infatuation? Time and the test of living together are usually the only way to know.

Sometimes young people are fortunate enough to learn, after a short but fervent courtship, that they are mistaken in their feelings, and that what they considered love is just a passing fancy; but sometimes it takes years of marriage to prove that point.

A young girl writes:

"DEAR MISS LEE: I have had an argument with one of my girl friends. Two years ago I met a young man and fell in love with him at first sight.

"Last summer I was going with another young man. I went with him four months until one night I saw the young man I'm supposed to be in love with. My friends say I'm not in love with him.

"I have gotten so I hate the fellow I have been going out with; I can't bear him.

"Is this real love or infatuation? The young man I love does not seem to care for me.

E. C. S.

Well, now, that is a problem, isn't it, E. C. S.? Really I don't see how you can love the young man if you don't know him. You may love his appearance and the kind of a man you picture in your mind as inhabiting his body. But you can hardly love him, can you?

If he did care for you and you had an opportunity to know him well you might not care for him at all. You would find that you were adoring an ideal whose outward appearance was similar to this young man's.

Rather tough on the boy friend to have such a shadowy rival, isn't it? The bad you can't get a good dose of you can't find out whether he lives up to the idea you have formed of him. Then you could either give the present boy friend the air or decide that you liked him best after all.

At any rate, the advice I gave the other girl of whom you speak in your letter, holds with you, too. Go out with different boys until you meet Mr. Right, whether he's this boy with whom you imagine yourself in love, the present boy friend or another.

"My Dear Virginia Lee: I have a very nice friend who certainly needs help. I am 18 and she is only 15, but many people know that. A young man 22 years old has fallen for her and she likes him. He thinks she is almost 20, I guess, 'cause he wants her to marry him. She hasn't the nerve to tell him her age, she likes him too well. Do you think she's making a mistake in not telling him?"

"SUNSHINE"

Absolutely, Sunshine. She can't legally marry at 15 without her parents' consent, and probably not then, and anyhow, she's too young to marry. If she hasn't the nerve to tell the young man the awful truth, can't she impower you to do it for her?

Brown Eyes: The lesson that your husband got from making a date with that woman and deceiving you will probably be enough to keep him from doing anything more like that for quite some time. Brown Eyes. So continue your efforts to please him and try to keep your home together.

Babe: Your married sister may have troubles of her own which make her cross and unsocial. You will soon be of age and then maybe you can go to work and earn money for pretty things. Try hard to see the good things in your life—your blessings. That always helps a little.

GRIND FOR PENNANT WILL BE LAUNCHED IN EIGHT CITIES

President Will Toss First
Ball As Champs
Open Season

By LES CONKLIN
I. N. S. Sports Writer
NEW YORK, April 13. — When the magic words "play ball" are heard in eight major league ball parks tomorrow, the spotlight will be focused on Washington where the Senators will play the world's champion Philadelphia Athletics in the capital's diamond inaugural.

While the other pennant contenders have drawn comparatively easy assignments for the opening day festivities, the Mackmen will be encountering tough opposition right from the opening gun.

The A's found the going rocky in the exhibition season, but the general impression that they would start the season with several wobbly spokes in their wheels received a jolt Saturday when Earnshaw, Walberg and Simmons scintillated in the Mackmen's brilliant triumph over the Phillies. Earnshaw and Walberg, regarded as pitching uncertainties, held the Phils to six hits and three runs in a late arrival, demonstrated by collecting three hits that he still retains the batting eye which gained him the league championship last season.

The inaugural between the Yankees and Red Sox at New York will be the feature from an attendance standpoint. Seventy thousand fans are expected to turn out to see the Yankees make their official bow under their new manager, Joe McCarthy.

In the other American League openers, Detroit invades St. Louis and Cleveland enters the Chicago White Sox.

Chicago will play host to the Pittsburgh Pirates at Wrigley Field before a capacity crowd in the feature National League inaugural. The champion St. Louis club has been given a soft spot. The Cards will pry the lid off at Cincinnati.

In the east, Boston fans will get their first glimpse of the colorful Brooklyn Robins. The New York Giants open their campaign at Philadelphia. Brooklyn and the Giants are riding on the crest of a winning streak as the season opens. Brooklyn showed a world of power in chalking up two smashing victories over the Yankees over the weekend, while the Giants nicked the White Sox twice. The important feature of the Giants' two triumphs was that they were scored through the efforts of three rookies who will make or break the club—Pitchers Berly and Schumacher and Third Baseman Johnny Vergez.

The Yankees' two setbacks bear out the general conviction that the club lacks the pitching strength necessary to win the pennant. The team is hitting the ball as hard as ever but the pitchers can't seem to get the ball past opposing batters.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—The Washington Senators are all ready for the gala opening of the season here tomorrow, with President Hoover destined to throw out the first ball.

Yesterday the Nationals trimmed Rochester, minor league champions, by a score of 3 to 1. Fischer pitched a good game for the winners.

Now it begins to look like his days are numbered. First it was President Barnard of the American League; then it was Ban Johnson, founder of the same league; now it may soon be that Herrmann, another great figure, may be demoted soon. It almost seems there is a conspiracy afoot with so many great men being removed by death all of a sudden.

MEET THE MANAGER

BY JACK SORDS

Shotton was an outfielder during his playing days.

Copyright, 1931, by Central Press

Burt Shotton, boss of the phailing Phils, is in the position of a man with a high-powered motor car which lacks tires.

The Phils are potent with the bat. They are the second hardest hitting club in the major leagues, but their pitching and fielding are woefully weak. Their bats could drive them to high rank in the National League if they possessed a defense sufficient to withstand the shocks of traveling the rocky road up from the cellar.

Shotton has struggled with the problem of trying to straighten out a lop-sided ball club almost ever since he took over the management of the Phillies in 1928.

Burt succeeded Stuffy McInnis who just couldn't dislodge the Philadelphia team from the cellar of the National League. In his first season, 1928, Shotton had the same kind of luck. The Phils couldn't be bugged.

The following year, however, the Quaker City crew managed to scramble up as far as fifth place, and a bright future was hoped for. But last season the Phils fell back again, with a dull, sickening thud, into last place.

However, things look a bit brighter for the Phils this spring. In training camp seasons their fielding and pitching has shown signs of improvement which may be lasting.

FRISCO BASEBALL MAGNATE MAY BE NEXT AMERICAN LEAGUE HEAD

NEW YORK, April 13.—William H. McCarthy of San Francisco, a former president of the Pacific Coast League, will be the next president of the American League, it was reliably reported today.

McCarthy will succeed the late Ernest Barnard as soon as the club owners gather at a special meeting to ratify a choice that was practically made last week.

Colonel Jacob Ruppert owner of the New York Yankees, is backing McCarthy, and the Californian is also favored by the directors of the Philadelphia, Cleveland, Detroit and Boston clubs.

From the Pacific coast came word that McCarthy has tentatively accepted a "feeler" from directors and the offer will be made official within a short time.

KNUTE ROCKNES BEST STORIES

As told by DON MILLER
One of the famous Four Horsemen of Notre Dame

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is a series of the late Knute Rockne's best stories with which the late Notre Dame grid leader put a smile on the faces of his fans. They are told by Don Miller, a close friend of Rockne's. Miller was one of the Four Horsemen, Rockne's famous backfield.

Though Knute Rockne was, in his later years, probably the busiest coach in football, he continued in full charge of the distribution of complimentary tickets to Notre Dame games.

The pleas of the players for tickets for Uncle Joe and Aunt Nettie gave Rock many a good chuckle. He must have enjoyed listening to all the yarns the boys put up to get an extra pastebord or so.

Which reminds me of two funny incidents that happened while Rockne was shelling out the ducats to players.

Last fall, a player approached the coach just before an important game and asked for two tickets. "Relatives?" queried Rock.

"Nope," the player snapped back, "tickets."

Even Rock got a chuckle out of that.

Then there was the story which concerns Harry Mehre, who did his stuff for Notre Dame about 10 years ago.

Mehre came from Huntington, Ind., which isn't so awfully far from South Bend, Ind. So Mehre's parents decided to make the trip to see their son play on old Cartier Field. Mehre asked Rock for complimentary.

REDS CHAMPIONS OF OHIO AT LEAST

CINCINNATI, O., April 13.—Regardless of their showing in the National League during the coming weeks, the Cincinnati Reds today believed they can claim the championship of Ohio as a result of two victories scored in two days over the Cleveland Indians.

Finding Shoffner, a relief pitcher, much to their liking, the Reds sent eleven men to bat in the last half of the eighth and scored six runs to finally win the game, 8 to 7.

Al Eckert tried to hurl the dirt game for the Reds but had to give way to Benny Frey in the seventh when the Indians nicked him for four runs and apparently won the game. Frey protected the lead which the eighth inning rally gave Cincinnati.

Both machines were slightly damaged when an auto operated by W. C. Hutchison, Dayton, collided with a coupe driven by Lloyd Berry, 111 1-2 W. Main St., this city, Sunday at 3 p. m. In front of The George Dodds and Sons Granite Co., W. Main St.

Police were told that Berry, driving west, attempted to turn around between street intersections and that Hutchison, traveling in the same direction, could not stop in time, his machine colliding with the left side of the coupe. A fender was bent and the left front tire on Hutchison's car was deflated. The damage to the coupe consisted of a bent running board and rear fender. Neither driver was hurt.

REPORT PORTUGAL REVOLT SPREADING

LONDON, April 13.—The revolutionary movement in progress against the government of Portugal in the Madeira and Azores Islands was reported today to have spread to the distant Portuguese colonial possessions of Angola, West Africa.

According to Lisbon dispatches to the Morning Post here, the Angola garrison turned insurrectionist.

CEDARVILLE BASEBALLERS ARE LOSERS TO MOREHEAD IN OPENER

Inability to bunch its even dozen hits to better advantage proved costly and Cedarville College's baseball team bowed to Morehead College, 7 to 2 in its season's opener at Morehead, Ky., Saturday afternoon.

Facing a team which won the Kentucky collegiate diamond championship last year, the Yellow Jackets, handicapped by lack of outdoor practice, put up a better game than the score would indicate.

The Borstmen outlived Morehead, twelve blows to ten but were blanked in every inning but the fourth when they chased two runs over the platter. The Morehead pitcher, who may be given a trial with the St. Louis Cardinals at the close of the spring season, kept the Cedarville bingles well scattered. Garlough and Albert Turner divided the pitching burden for Cedarville, the former twirling five innings. He yielded three runs but none of the tallies were earned. Turner finished on the hill and was fairly effective although an inability to locate the plate got him in trouble on several occasions. The two Cedarville pitchers between them struck out fifteen batters.

Allen, second baseman for the Yellow-Jackets, got on base each of the four times he went to bat, pounding out three hits and being safe once on a fielder's choice. Wendell Boyer collected two safeties.

Cedarville's next foe will be the University of Dayton Wednesday afternoon on the Flyer diamond.

If the delivery trucks of the grocer, milkman and butcher came around to a city family every morning, and made the housewife a present of four quarts of milk, a pound of butter, a ham, two pounds of sausage, a pound of lard, a sack of flour, a peck of potatoes, a dozen eggs, a pair of broilers, some onions, lettuce, carrots, radishes, asparagus, celery, beans and other green stuff—the family would be apt to think that they had received a very substantial gift.

They might, in fact, be moved to figure out the value of the daily gift, counting milk at 14 cents a quart, butter at 35 cents, eggs at 20 cents, potatoes at 45 cents, and so on, depending on the retail prices being asked by the stores at that time.

Altogether it would figure up to a very respectable total; and if, in addition, a man came around once a month and left enough money to pay the rent, and another man came with enough firewood so that no coal had to be bought, the family might easily fancy themselves on Easy Street—at least as long as it lasted.

Should these supplies be considered as income to the city family we are discussing? Certainly the housewife herself would think so, even though it was received in the form of free food supplies and free rent, and not in cash.

If you have read thus far, you probably see what I am getting at. A free daily 56 cents' worth of milk, 35 cents' worth of butter, a $2 pair of broilers, and so on, are unheard of in the cities, but they are the merest commonplace on the farms. To be sure, they are not actually free, even on the farms. A good deal of time and work goes into the production of each of them, and this is not always spare time.

The fact remains that a normal family possessing a normal equipment of garden, cows, hens, livestock and orchard, is in receipt of the equivalent of a large cash income.

Any number of studies have been made of the value of this produce to the farmer, but with hardly any exception these are useless, because they figure the various commodities at their wholesale value instead of at their retail purchase value.

If a free quart of milk is the same as 14 cents income to the city housewife, it is 14 cents income to the country housewife, not the 5% cents that that quart of milk might have been sold for.

The net result, as anyone can see, is that the real income of the normal farmer, when compared with that of the city family, is persistently and seriously underestimated. It might not matter if that comparison were not to be made, but in fact that is what these studies are usually made for.

Students and gatherers of statistics should bear in mind that what the farm produces, plus rent and fuel, should not be figured at what they would sell for at wholesale, but what they would cost a city family at retail. If this were always done, it would be much clearer why so many million American families continue to stay on farms and prosper there.

N. Y. STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, April 13.—Most of the active stocks were forced downward at the beginning of the new week by an accumulation of selling orders, which were easily taken care of in the first half hour, and the market was ready for another moderate rally. The rails and the oils and coppers, with last week's specialties, lost about a point on the average, while new forward movements were inaugurated in Auburn auto and scattering utilities. These advances gained momentum in the second hour, with the motor stocks active and firm.

LEGION AUXILIARY TO PRESENT COMEDY WITH HOME TALENT

"Corporal Engen," a comedy to be presented with local talent, will be given at the Opera House here April 23 and 24, it is announced, under auspices of the American Legion Auxiliary.

The production will be staged by the Universal Producing Co., Fairfield, Ia., and the cast will be directed by Miss Carolyn Sanders, Trinidad, Colo., a director for the company who came here after a successful presentation at Auburn, Ind.

Miss Sanders met with members of the committee Sunday night, and enlistment of a cast for the comedy was started Monday. Miss Sanders was accompanied here by her mother, Mrs. A. J. Sanders, of Trinidad, who is enjoying a visit with her daughter.

The same company presented "Aunt Lucia" under auspices of Delta Theta Tau Sorority here last year.

THE ROMANCE OF A BUSINESS GIRL

READ THIS FIRST:

Mary Vaughn is private secretary to Ronald K. Foster, an investment banker of Wall Street. She is the sole support of her mother, twin brothers and a sister, who is only two years her junior, whom she has always cared for and to whom she has given the best of everything. Bonnie abhors work, is the spoiled beauty of the family and lets it be known that she is not going to drudge all her life for a living. Mary's whole world changes when debonair Dick Baldwin, who works for another firm in "the street" begins to take her out. Mary plans to attend a big football game with Dick, so Bonnie arranges for Walter Hyme to take her also, but his old car conveniently breaks down at the last moment, so Dick asks them to ride in his rumble seat.

Bonnie exerts herself all day to attract Dick to her and finally pretends to have taken a severe cold from riding in the cold wind, so she rides home with Dick in the coupe, while Mary shivers in the rumble seat with Walter, and the evening is wretched for Mary. Bonnie makes the most of her invalidism and Dick brings her flowers and candy when he comes to see Mary the next day. Dick makes a date with Mary for Friday night before he leaves the city on business, and Mary devotes herself to her evening work. On Friday night, she dines with Dick at a Japanese restaurant in Greenwich Village. He goes to Mary's home for Sunday dinner, where Bonnie entertains him while Mary helps her mother with the work. Some of Bonnie's crowd come in for the evening and Dick helps Mary with the lunch.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 12

Mary had to work late at the office the next three nights. The new stock was issued on Wednesday, and it was midnight every night when she reached home. Wednesday was a hectic day, as issue days always were. It seemed to Mary as if she were actually in several places at once. While she talked over the telephone, she watched the translux with one eye, read letters with the other and quoted prices and sales to Foster. Order clerks, salesmen and customers came and went. It was a big day and the new stock gained two points at once. Foster was vastly pleased. He, too, was overjoyed from work and anxiety, but his mood was genial and solicitous toward Mary. He realized that much he accomplished was an indirect result of her loyalty and ability.

Frazier dropped in leisurely. His manner was magnanimous. "Well, little girl," he greeted her. "You should be celebrating, too. Just think, Mary, if you hadn't been so prudish, you might have made a neat little sum on my proposition. Now aren't you sorry you didn't? I've made two thousand today without lifting a finger."

"Oh, yes, you lifted your whole hand when you signed your check a few days ago," she reminded him. "I might have made that effort, only I had no check to sign."

"You didn't need one. I told you what I would do. Besides, Mary, you could be signing checks if you would listen to reason," significantly.

"That is—listen to you," she mocked him with good humor that she did not feel at all toward him.

"Well, anyway, let's celebrate the day. You've been working like a dog and you deserve a little vacation. Come, we can have dinner, take in a show, then go somewhere to dance. Okay?"

"You forget that I have to get to work in the morning, don't you? Besides, I'll have to work tonight, too, and maybe every night this week. An extra big day puts us back two or three, as well as making extra work."

He regarded her closely for a moment. Then he leaned forward and said, "Mary, why do you always find such good reasons for not accepting my invitations? I believe I know. But you are being foolish. Why? I would do anything in the world for you, if you would let me. Come, be nice to me, and see if you don't like me better than you think you do. You don't give me a chance, even."

Mary was disturbed. She would like to tell him never to come into her office again—but she didn't dare. "I can't understand why you insist upon entertaining me, Mr. Frazier. I'm not a good companion anyway. Besides, I don't care about the things you like, I'm sure. In all New York, can't you find many other girls whose company you would prefer to mine?"

"No one," he assured her so solemnly that she almost laughed aloud. But Mary didn't know that when a man of a persistent temperament once set his mind on a certain girl that as persistently eludes him, he will move heaven and earth to obtain her. "I'll give you time to think it over, little girl. But you never will get to know me with just talking business here in the office. Let me prove to you what a good fellow I can be."

"Say that again, Mary."

It was only that evening that the issue of her treatment of Martin Frazier came up again. Foster had remarked, as they worked:

"By the way, Miss Vaughn, I wonder if you could be a little more cordial to Frazier, just on business principles. You know what he means to the business, and just now—well, he could almost make or break us, you know. I've known him a long time, and he's really a good sort—just don't take him too seriously. He will probably want to hold your hand. Kid him along. You can do it. Several times he has referred to you, and the other day he remarked that you were about as cold as a polar bear on an iceberg." Foster laughed with awkward understanding.

Mary flushed with resentment. "I am always cordial to Mr. Frazier, but he continually annoys me with invitations to go out with him, and I can't accept them."

"Him! Any special reason?"

"Yes, several. I dislike and distrust him, for one thing. I haven't the time to give him and he isn't a man with whom I would enjoy being with, anyway."

Foster looked troubled. "Well, of course, I wouldn't put you under obligations to entertain him, but you might find some way to please him so he will stand by us."

"Why, if you think that by going out with him occasionally, I can be of special service to you, I'll try, Mr. Foster."

"It would be a special service to me, Miss Vaughn, and I'd appreciate it mightily, right now."

So it was that when Martin Frazier came into the office two days later, Mary had crossed her Rubicon and was awaiting her encounter with enemy or friend, as Frazier might prove to be. She literally held her breath until he had gone through the usual preliminary remarks and reached the personal part of the rehearsal. He was resplendent in new attire, from tip to toe, and immaculately groomed. In fact, he was almost handsome, she had to admit.

"I see you survived the latest ordeal with the usual tranquility. You're a great girl, Mary. That's why you attract me. You are one in a million. Yes, my dear, I mean it. And I intend to stay on the subject until you are convinced that I am serious."

Mary smiled sweetly, serenely, knowing that she was about to hurl a bomb at him. "Then I might as well take you seriously here and now, to prove to you that you won't enjoy my company as much as you imagine you will. Is that a proposition?"

She might as well have touched off a bomb. For a moment he acted as if his ears and eyes had deceived him. "Say that again, Mary," he began dully and continued with mounting exultation. "It's too good to be true! Say, Mary, you're been kidding me along all the time. Smart girl, you are, Mary. Well, well! Now you have me so fussed I don't know where to invite you. I can't think of names or places, even. Let's see—anywhere you say, dear. How shall we celebrate, anyway?"

He was really quite as surprised as he acted, Mary knew. He amused her. How absurd that a man who commanded unlimited resources could act as if she had granted him the most coveted thing in the world, by accepting an invitation to go out with him!

"Any of the dozen or more places you have already suggested, will do," she offered indifferently.

"When? Tonight, or tomorrow night? Make it both."

"No, tomorrow night. It will be Saturday—a half day and no getting to work the next morning."

"Mary, don't wake me up and tell me I'm dreaming and don't buy a dress and wear it before anyone else saw it."

"I won't," she laughed. He could be a pleasant companion if he chose, she knew that. But, somehow, she had never liked him, and she never would think of going out with him for her own pleasure alone. Business men entertained their associates and clients for strictly business reasons. So would she. It was part of the game of being modern and diplomatic.

Well, that meant a new evening dress. She would have to select one the next afternoon that could be worn without alterations. Bonnie had ruined her new red chiffon before she even had a chance to wear it. This time, she would buy a dress and wear it before anyone else saw it.

Besides, she had to have a new dress for Sunday night, as well. Dick was taking her to a studio party in the village.

She told Foster that she was going out with Frazier on Saturday evening. He was pleased. "I hope you have a better time than you anticipate. You know, it's good business to entertain clients. And when they prefer you to me, it's all in the firm. I do appreciate your interest, Miss Vaughn, and you won't lose anything by it. I can tell you. It's good experience for you to meet all kinds of situations, and cope with them," he added significantly. "If I can help you in any way—"

"I believe not, thank you. It might have told him that it would cost money to dress for going about with Frazier, but it was typical of Mary that she never would take advantage of a thing like that to gain anything for herself. The problem might even cause her some concern, but she would never let anyone know it.

MAKING OF CIGARS IN OHIO GAINING

BETHESDA, O., April 13.—The depression has improved at least one industry in Ohio—the cigar manufacturing business.

Money being scarce, smokers are giving up higher-priced cigars and taking the "two-for-a-nickel" brand. That brand is manufactured throughout eastern Ohio.

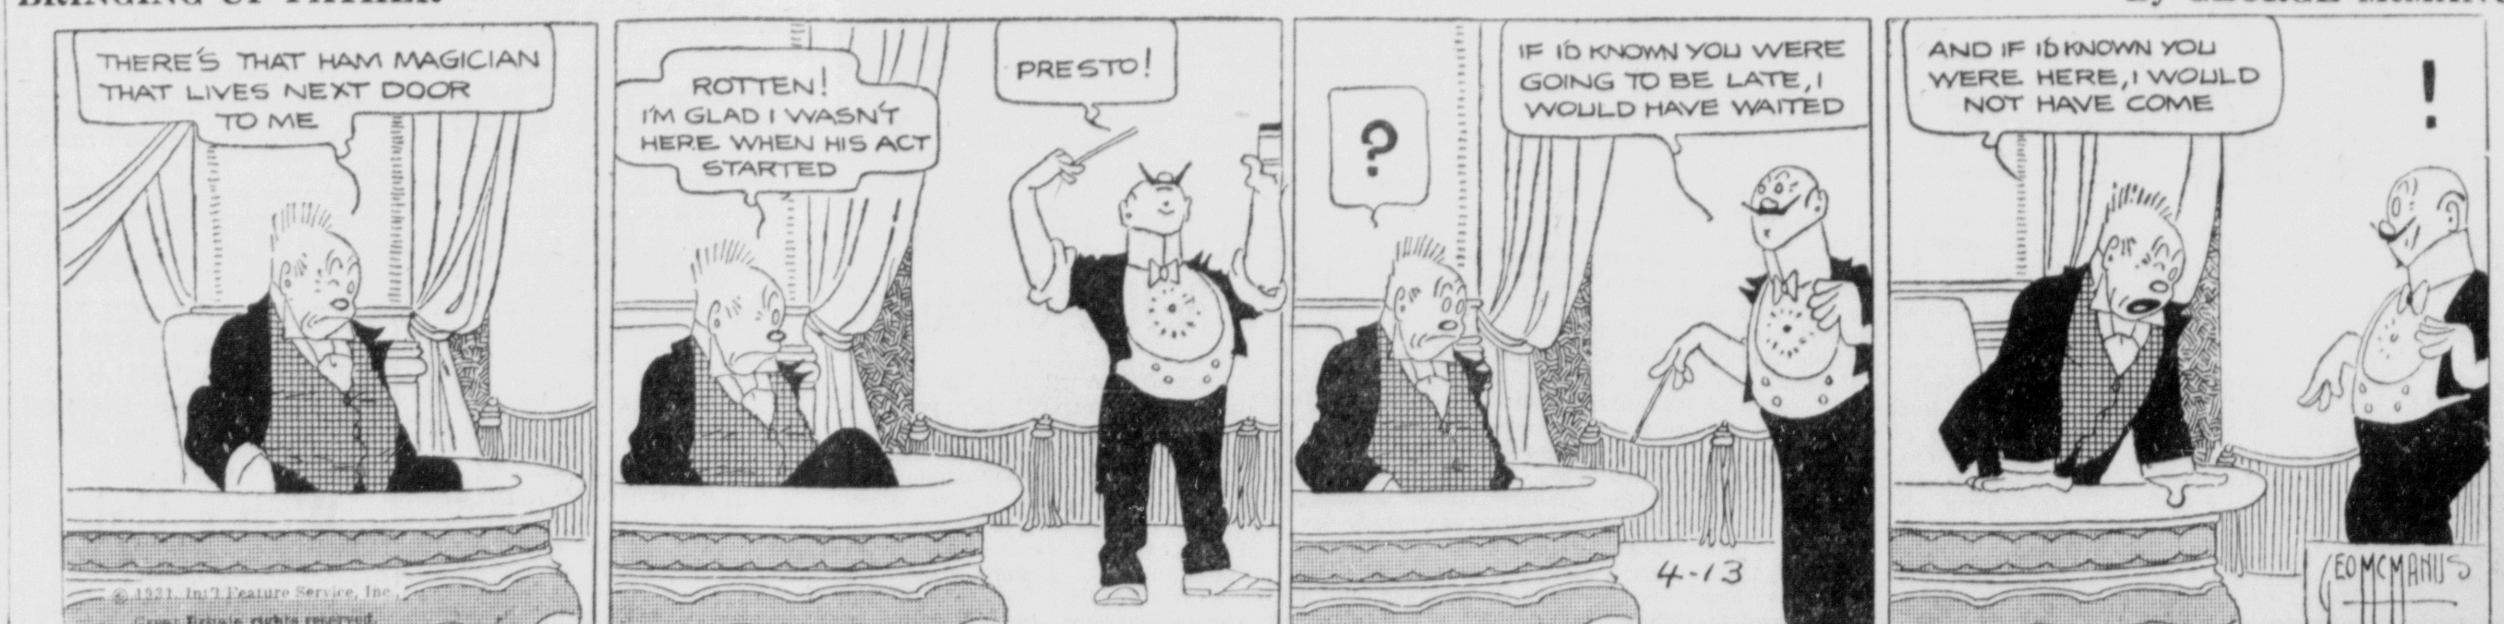

Fortunately for Ohio, the state has plenty of tobacco for that brand of cigar. Despite the drought, the 1930 crop was the best in thirty years, it is said.

The Theater

With its flair for noticing resemblances, Hollywood has labeled Warren William as John Barrymore's double. William, who played in the Broadway production of "The Vinegar Tree," shows signs of being able to live down the handicap.

He is Dolores Costello's leading man in "Expensive Woman" and will take the Otis Skinner role in the talkie version of "The Honor of the Family." The young actor is the third whose profile has been likened to the aquiline features of Barrymore, whose wife he will play opposite.

Keith first on record, never cut much of a figure in the films, although he is now profitably engaged in the west coast production of "Elizabeth, the Queen." Fred-

Some years ago when the Burbank Theater was the shining temple of the drama in Los Angeles, Richard Bennett was guest star in "Pierre of the Plains." During one performance there was so much noise from the wings that Bennett interrupted a dramatic scene to exclaim: "when you two fellows quit gabbing, we'll go on with this play."

The two guilty ones were Robert Leonard and Charles Giblyn. This week on Marion Davies' set, Leonard stopped rehearsals on a scene for "Five and Ten." "If you two fellows will be quiet over there," he said, "we'll make this picture. The guilty ones this time were Richard Bennett and Charles Giblyn.

eric March, who came to Hollywood in "The Royal Family," has lived down the resemblance and is booming in his own right. He played in "The Royal Family" on the screen also.

For talkie purposes Balzac's story has been changed from the time of Napoleon to the late war. Bebe Daniels plays the leader of the gang of crooks whom Warren outwits and Lloyd Bacon will direct.

Objections of Theodore Dreiser to the movie script of his novel, "An American Tragedy," fail to get under the skin of Director Josef Von Sternberg. Returned from Lake Arrowhead, where he has been on location with the company, he answered the charges mildly.

"Mr. Dreiser," he declared, "is wrong when he says we can't suggest the psychology of 'An American Tragedy' in the length of my scenario. I asked to direct this picture because I liked the book, and have treated it objectively... that is, free from any influences. When we are through, I think we will have an interesting picture. It packs a lot of dynamite."

According to Von Sternberg, no scenario ever was written by S. M. Eisenstein, the Russian director. "He wrote a treatment," Von Sternberg says. "That is an explanation of how he would approach the story. As nearly as I could see, it would have taken fifty reels. Dreiser is reported to have approved what he termed a scenario prepared by Eisenstein."

POLITICAL FUTURE OF REPUBLICANS IN OHIO IS UNCERTAIN

COLUMBUS, O., April 13.—More than the usual uncertainty about the political future of the state Republican party prevails here as a result of developments during the closing days of the regular session of the state legislature.

Often-repeated rumors that State Senator Robert A. Taft of Cincinnati, son of the late President and chief justice, may be a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor in 1932, gave political observers new material on which to base their speculations.

Taft has been frequently mentioned as a gubernatorial possibility but the death of Speaker Nicholas Longworth resulted in what probably was his first open statement about the possibility.

Asked whether he would be a candidate to succeed Mr. Longworth in Congress, the Cincinnati senator had little to say either way.

"Have you decided whether you'd like to go to Washington?" newspapermen asked him.

"I haven't even decided whether I'd like to go to Columbus," he answered good-humoredly, and reporters believed he meant that he had not decided whether he wished to be a candidate for governor.

Followers of state politics pointed out that the possible quest of the gubernatorial nomination by Taft would likely eliminate former Governor Myers Y. Cooper from the race.

Though the former chief executive has never said he will be a candidate again, many of his friends believe he would welcome an opportunity to be governor once more.

Taft, Cooper and the present Republican state chairman, Ed Schoor all come from the Cincinnati section. Their leadership probably would be disputed by the northern half of the state which it was said, is friendly to former Congressman James T. Begg and several others.

THREE INJURED AS
AUTOS COLLIDE ON
CINCINNATI PIKE

Mrs. William J. Foster, Columbus, whose husband is affiliated with the Ohio Anti-Saloon League, suffered fractures of three or four ribs and a colored couple in the other machine sustained minor injuries in an auto collision on the Cincinnati Pike, three miles south of Xenia Saturday afternoon.

The mishap occurred when an auto driven by C. R. McDuffey, 18, colored, also occupied by Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Smith, colored, all of Cincinnati, traveling toward Xenia, passed a truck on a hill just as a car driven by Foster, also occupied by his wife and two small daughters, going south, appeared over the crest of the hill.

Foster tried to avert a collision by swerving toward a ditch on the wrong side of the highway while McDuffey applied the brakes of his own car, which spun around, the two autos colliding in the middle of the pike. Both cars upset and were badly damaged.

Mrs. Foster, whose husband and children escaped injury, was taken to Espey Hospital. Sheriff John Baughn and L. A. Davis, county road patrolman, who were summoned to the scene of the crash, took Mr. and Mrs. Smith to the same hospital. Smith was treated for a severe cut on the left knee and an abrasion on the head and his wife sustained an injured left shoulder. Their injuries were not serious, however, and both were discharged from the hospital after receiving medical attention. McDuffey was unhurt.

The Romance of Alice Roosevelt and Nicholas Longworth
LONGWORTH A PERSISTENT SUITOR
Late Speaker Dogged In Attention To President's Daughter Who Flitted Like A Gay Butterfly In Capital Society, Story Of Courting Reveals

By ANNE M. KEEZER
Written Especially for Central Press

WASHINGTON, April 13.—When Alice Lee Roosevelt made her debut in Washington she was 18 years old, a slender, radiant, fascinating girl.

She was the ranking debutante of the United States. Her father was President, the White House was her home, and the world was at her feet. No wonder they called her Princess Alice. It really was a glorious life she lived. There were all of the advantages enjoyed by more traditional royalty, without any of the tiresome business of court etiquette to cramp a girl's style. And anyway, Princess Alice was pretty much a law unto herself. She rode, she danced, she motored in one of the loveliest motor-coats history has so far recorded. Of course it was Alice blue, but added to that was a lining of pure white fur—a regal touch.

Tireless Debutante

Society in Washington has never been slow for a debutante. Many girls in their first season have to steal a week off now and then to stay at home and rest incommunicado. But not Alice Roosevelt. She seemed tireless. When there were too few parties in Washington she dashed to parties in New York.

Her program would make a present-day debutante swoon in a fine old-fashioned way. Everyone marveled at her vitality. Probably her father regarded it merely as the Roosevelt tradition, but others, especially the delicately nurtured attaches at the foreign embassies, looked upon her as some modern marvel—a Phoenix arising new born every morning from the ashes of last night's party.

She Was 20

Nick Longworth entered the lists for the princess' hand when she was about 20. She had had two seasons of gaiety, her poise and wit were the talk of Washington. No one ever estimated the number of beaux who followed her around, trying to anticipate some wish which would bring them her company for a few hours at a time. There were many extremely eligible young men in the capital, but as far as anyone could discover Alice was heart whole and going strong.

Nick made no great splash as he got into that particular swim, but after while people began to notice that whenever Alice was asked out, Nick was pretty sure to be there, too. He liked so many of the things that she did. Horses, dancing, gay company. And he had a certain solid quality that many of the young diplomats and society lads lacked. He had his career to make on the Hill, and he tended to that with the same dogged persistence that marked his attentions to the princess. He drove a car, and the Alice blue coat was often beside him.

But nothing definite enough to cast real gloom over Nick's rivals occurred, and Alice continued on her gay career, flitting like a gorgeous and willful butterfly from city to city, lighting long enough to add more followers to her train, and having a thoroughly marvelous time.

A Trip to Cincinnati

Then, out of a fairly clear sky, she went to Cincinnati. Not merely to Cincinnati, but to the home of the Wallingfords, Mrs. Wallingford was Nick's sister, and Nick was one of the party that escorted Princess Alice to Ohio. When she came back to Washington she was the same Alice, as keen for any good time as ever, but there were heartburnings and soul searchings among the young men of Washington.

Whatever did Alice find to interest her in Cincinnati?

PREPARING PLANE FOR SECOND FLIGHT

AKRON, O., April 13.—Finishing touches are being added to the giant engine which is to be used by Miss Frankie Renner, pretty Akron aviatrix, in her second attempt to establish a women's altitude record. The flight probably will be made within the next two weeks.

The motor is being built at the Wright Aeronautical Corporation plant in Patterson, N. J. It will be installed in the same Waco bi-plane which Frankie used in her first flight March 13, when she reached an altitude of 24,990 feet. Several new features are being incorporated into the new engine to adapt it for high altitude flying, according to Hugh Robbins, manager of the Robbins Flying Service where Frankie is employed as a secretary. The engine will have a specially built supercharger and carburetor among other improvements.

On her second flight, Miss Renner has announced she will carry two sealed barographs instead of one. Both will be sent to the U. S. Bureau of Standards for calibrations.

Frankie hopes to better her first mark by more than 10,000 feet. She has set her goal at 35,000 feet, about 6,000 feet higher than the present record held by Ruth Nichols of New York.
